Good afternoon

I wish to advise I do not support the proposed Northern Access Road which will destroy the railway line and corridor access into Hobart. Justification for such a road should be viable not just in terms of cost but more importantly, for its impact for the money spent. There is justification for the enormity of such a road project when the Northern Corridor exists already with a railway line. No matter the size of the city there is exhaustive evidence that rail has proven to be far better at moving large crowds efficiently.

Please consider my submission.

Regards
