Dear Tasmanian Government Administration Committee,

As a female educator who has both attended and now works in a faith-based school, I am deeply concerned about the direction of the inquiry into discrimination and bullying in Tasmanian schools.

I believe that faith-based schools provide a positive and nurturing environment for children, with a focus on values and character building. It is disheartening to see these schools being vilified and targeted in the inquiry.

I urge the Committee to consider the invaluable role that faith-based schools play in shaping young minds and promoting a sense of community and belonging. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,
Karalyn Bylsma
