4. Section 11B substituted

Section 11B of the Principal Act is repealed and the following sections are substituted:

11B. Certain aggravating circumstances to be taken into account when sentencing offenders

- (1) In determining the appropriate sentence for an offender, the court is to take into account, as an aggravating circumstance in relation to the offence, whether the offender was motivated to commit the offence, in whole or in part –
  - (a) as a result of hatred for, or prejudice against, any victim of the offence, due to that victim having a relevant attribute; or
  - (b) as a result of –
    - (i) hatred for, or prejudice against, a person or group of persons due to that person or group having a relevant attribute; and
    - (ii) the offender believing, at the relevant time, that a victim of the offence had the relevant attribute or was associated with the person or group referred to in subparagraph (i).

- (2) For the purposes of this section, a person is taken to be motivated to commit an offence as a result of hatred for, or prejudice against, a person or group due to a relevant attribute if, at the time of committing the offence or immediately before or immediately after committing the offence, the person demonstrated, or expressed, hostility, malice or ill-will in respect of that attribute.
- (3) For the purposes of this section, a relevant attribute of a person or group may include, but is not limited to, one or more of the following attributes or characteristics:
  - (a) the race, ethnicity or nationality of the person or one or more group members;
  - (b) the age of the person or one or more group members;
  - (c) the religious belief or affiliation of the person or one or more group members;
  - (d) the language used to communicate by the person or one or more group members;
  - (e) the gender, or gender identity, of the person or one or more group members;
