

Land Use Zoning Change of Postmortem Donated Land

Ms BURNET to MINISTER for HOUSING, PLANNING and CONSUMER AFFAIRS

My question is from Shannon from Hobart. Around Tasmania, land has been donated by individuals or their family postmortem in their memory for community use. It is being used by state or local governments and zoning is being changed from community use. What right do state and local governments have to take and modify land that has been donated in good faith to the community for their use in perpetuity?
