

Independent Education Review – Update

Mr FAIRS question to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Recognising that you released the final report of the Independent Review of Education in Tasmania in January of this year, I understand the government has identified four areas where we can take immediate action to achieve improved outcomes. These areas include improving school staff well-being, ensuring alignment between our education system and the University of Tasmania, and getting ready to try a multi-school organisation model. What is the status of those immediate actions? How much progress has been made?
