Hello Mr. Tim Mills,

A small contribution to the inquiry.

Might I suggest when trucks, large trucks, have engaged a low gear to either go up or go down steep inclines, such as the southern outlet in Launceston, that the driver be required to turn on their hazard lights.

In the many years I have travelled this Launceston section of road/highway, I think I have only seen one or two trucks whose driver has been thoughtful enough to turn on his lights to warn other traffic he is moving slowly in what was until only recently (in response to accidents?) a 110 kmh zone and now a 90 kmh zone.

For what it is worth,

Patrick.

Patrick. J. Carracher
